Something About the Ancient First Church and Its Pastors-First Minister Came from Norwich in 1705.

The First Congregational church of The First Congregational church of Plainfield was organized and the first pastor, Rev. Joseph Coit, whom the society called from Norwich, was ordained Jan. 3, 1795. Mr. Coit had been preaching in the Quinebaug Plantation (what is now Canterbury and Plainfield) lince their first town meeting in 1699. This was the first church of Christ in the town of Plainfield, the third in Windham county field, the third in Windham county and the thirty-seventh in the colony, and the thirty-seventh in the colony, it numbered ten men and the two deacons were William Douglass and Jacob Warren. This church included Canterbury until June 11, 1711, when a church was formed in that town.

Second Church in 1/20.

The first meeting house was built by the town on the top of Black Hill, near a crossing place of the Quinebaug river, convenient for the inhabitants of the entire Plantation, but after the Canterbury church was formed it was voted to build "by the country road that goes from north to south end of the town," about half Second Church in 1720.

Rev. Mr. Coit resigned as pastor in 1748 and died here in 1750, aged 77, after devoting 49 years to this people.

The second pastor, Rev. David P. Rowland, served the church faithfully from 1748 to 1761.

Rev. John Fuller served from 1769 to 1777 and he drew the Separates back to the old church hope until his pastor over a united people until his pastor over a united people until his leath, Oct. 3, 1777.

The Third Edifice.

A third meeting house was built in 1784 on the spot where the present church stands. Dec. 22 of that year Rev. Joel Binedict became pastor and continued to serve until his death, which occurred at the Benedict parsonage (the old Wing house now comage (the old Wing house now occupied by William Adams) Feb. 13. Ten days after the disaster, steps were taken to build the present church on the same spot. This church was opened for use before the installation of Rev. Orin Fowler in 1820, but the of Rev. Orin Fowler in 1820, but the galleries on three sides and the steeple were not finished until the following year. The first Sunday school in Plainfield was held in White Hall schoolhouse (now the cottage occupied by Dan Brown) and was taught by Mrs. Elkanah C. Eaton and her sister, Miss Martha Smith. In the spring of 1820 the Sunday school in the church was started. While Mr. Fowler was pastor here he built for himself the house now owned by Edward Pike, From April, 1832, to April, 1841, Rev. Samuel Rockwell was pastor here. During his ministry the church experienced a revival of religion. Mr. Rockwell married for his second wife, Elizabeth Eaton, daughter of Col. Elkanah C. Eaton.

During his pas-torate the church was remodeled and June 28, 1877 the society voted to give the Ladies' Aid society to granized that same year, liberty to fit up and com-plete the basement of the church for religious and social services.

Rev. A. J. Quick was pastor here from June, 1883, to Dec. 30, 1887. During his pastorate the church issued a revision of the form of admission, pre-revision of the form of admission, pre-pared during the pastorate of his pred-ecessor. A Young People's society of Christian Endeavor was organized here Dec. 19, 1886, with five members. The officers were: President, Charles F. Burgess (now of Moosup); vice president dent, Miss Ellen B. Lynch; secretary and treasurer, Miss Sarah E. Francis; lookout committee, Miss Mary E. Averill and Miss Ellen B. Lynch, Rev. H. T. Arnold's Pastorate.

The fifteenth pastor, Rev. Henry T. Arnold, now of Norwich, came to Plainfield in 1887. In 1899, through the munificence of William Kinne, A. M., an addition was made to the parsonage of a library building, affording to the pastor. ing to the pastor a fine study and containing a pastor's library of about 2,000 volumes, for the most part given 2,000 volumes, for the most part given by Mr. Kinne with provisions for a continual enlargement of this collection of rare, useful and interesting books. Mr. Kinne requested that this be called The Benedict library, as it contains Dr. Benedict's books.

Memorial Organ. July 23, 1899, an elegant organ of inest workmanship was received from Miss Isabella B. Pratt and her broth-er, Charles W. Pratt, in memory of their mother, Mrs. Sarah Bradford Pratt, who died Sept. 16, 1898.

Clock on 200th Anniversary. Aug. 24, 1904, the church celebrated its 200th anniversary with special ser-vices, during which Henry Dorrance for the committee, presented the Ec-clesiastical society a fine tower clock for which the dial plates were prepared when the church was built Mr. Dorrance stated that it was through the efforts of Col. Abel Andros, Dr. Josiah Fuller, Elias Woodward, Walter Palmer, Joseph Eaton, Esq., and Aaron Crary, appointed Dec. 6, 1815, that the present building was erected and it was in memory of these men that the clock was presented by their living descendants. The lettering for the in-scription on the panel of the clock is the work of Mrs. Sarah Francis Dorrance and the board is a fine piece of cherry found among the effects of the late Joseph Dean, bought by W. P. Bobcock and kept by him for this purpose. Since Mr. Arnold's retirement the church has had three pastors, Rev. Mr. Balcom, Rev. Mr. Bamford and the present pastor, Rev. William Lakin. The church has received sev-eral substantial additions to its fund during the past few years. The beau-tiful individual communion service in use at the present time was the gift of Miss Nellie Kingsley. The church has electric lights in both the audience room and vestry and is a well pre-served edifice for one built 95 years
